

Children with Special Health Care Needs in IDAHO

Who are Children/Youth with Special Health Care Needs?

Children/youth with special health care needs (CYSHCN) have or are at increased risk for a chronic physical, developmental, behavioral, or emotional condition. They usually require health and related services of a type or amount beyond that required by children generally. In fact, children with special health care needs (ages 17 and under) account for 40% or more of medical expenditures for children overall*.

A Personal Look at a Family Member in Idaho:

"My youngest child has autism, epilepsy, and a chromosome disorder. The challenges are more than one family can bear at times and yet I always know that I can connect and search for resources with the help of the IPUL staff. IPUL empowers parents and guides them to find, educate and apply for needed resources. In my opinion the best part of this is that IPUL doesn't just do the work for you, they teach families how to help themselves. These people don't just study up on how to do their job; many of them live with children with special needs. The difference that this makes for families is incredible. They understand the emotional side of the family, it is not just a passion on their part it is compassion because they have shared many of our challenges."

Idaho Parents Unlimited, Inc., a Family-to-Family Health Information and Education Center

Our Work:

The Family to Family Health (F2F) Information Center works at Idaho Parents Unlimited, Inc. works to help sustain the health and well-being of Idaho’s families, their children and youth with special health care needs. The program values family-centered care and honors the strengths, cultures, traditions and expertise in the family/professional partnership. The F2F project assists families with:

- Finding payment for medical care
- Obtaining help navigating public health care financial problems
- Seeking dialogue with other parents in similar situations
- Looking for information to find community resources
- Linking to an established clearing house of information about health care issues
- Obtaining one to one assistance finding information and getting referrals for specific health problems
- Advocating for their child
- Locating and attending workshops and obtaining materials about related health care issues, including information tailored to assist youth and parents in transition to adulthood
- Collaborating with Idaho's Family Voices and the national network of Family Voices, which are the technical assistance arms of F 2F
- Gaining empowerment to make changes in established federal, state, and local governing systems

2010-2011 ID F2F HIC Activity Highlight

“The area in which we had the greatest impact was through a wonderful partnership with our Children’s Special Health Care Program which created Transition Materials for Youth with Special Health Care Needs and their families. In September, a video created by IPUL Youth Volunteers on CYSHCN Transition was shown at the Council for Exceptional Children Conference which is attended by several hundred Educators from around the state. More than 1,000 Transition kits were requested at this conference. We will continue to promote the Transition Materials and work with our Youth representatives to address their health care information needs and outreach.”
